

May 3, 2018

The following article is located at: <https://www.christianitytoday.com/pastors/2007/november-online-only/out-of-context-bryan-wilkerson.html>

CT Pastors, November 2007

CHURCH PLANTING

Out of Context: Bryan Wilkerson

posted November 29, 2007

"These days, people can get good teaching, wonderful music, and excellent writing, whether through iPods, TV, or online. They learn to shop around and pick and choose. Then they expect the same high quality in their local church. A generation ago, the average person learned to accept his home pastor and was faithful to his local church. But now, people's appetites for excellence have been heightened."

-Bryan Wilkerson is the senior pastor of Grace Chapel in Lexington, Massachusetts. Taken from "5 Kinds of Christians" in the Fall 2007 issue of Leadership journal. To see the quote IN context, you'll need to see the print version of Leadership. To subscribe, click on the cover of Leadership on this page.

You have reached the end of this Article Preview

To continue reading, join now for free and get complete access.

Log In

Join Now for Free

© 2018 Christianity Today